

French Island National Park

Visitor Guide

Although close to Melbourne, French Island National Park is a mystery to many people due to its isolated location in Western Port. As a result, the park features some fantastically underrated opportunities for walking and cycling among a diverse landscape of mangroves, saltmarsh, heaths and open woodlands.

Getting there

French Island National Park is accessible by ferry from Stony Point and Cowes.

Stony Point is located 80km south-east from Melbourne CBD. Take the Western Port Ferries passenger ferry from Stony Point across to French Island. The trip takes 10 to 12 minutes and delivers you to Tankerton Jetty on French Island.

Tickets are available for purchase on the ferry or online. Check www.westernportferries.com.au or phone 03 5257 4565 for the ferry timetable and weather conditions. Ferry services can be cancelled at very short notice.

The only roads in the park open to vehicles are Link Road, Clump Road and Causeway Road (south of the junction with Link Road). Seasonal road closures apply. Check online at www.parks.vic.gov.au or phone 13 1963.

Things to see and do

French Island National Park has much to offer including unspoiled natural bushland and walking along beaches where your only companions are hundreds of wading birds.

Experience wonderful walks and bike rides through a range of habitats. There are day, half day and shorter walks and rides starting at Tankerton Foreshore Reserve.

Camping

Camping is available at Fairhaven Campsite located 5km from the Tankerton Jetty on the west coast foreshore. Fairhaven Campsite offers 20 individual sites for up to 2 people per site, with the opportunity to stay in an idyllic natural setting.

Only basic toilet facilities and water supplies (purify or boil first) are provided and due to the highly combustible vegetation of the island, no open fires are permitted at any time. A portable gas stove, or similar, is essential. The General Store is approximately 7.5km away.

Campsites are free but must be booked online at www.parkstay.vic.gov.au or phone 13 1963.

Wildlife viewing

The vegetation at French Island National Park is rich and diverse, containing over 580 indigenous plant species, including more than 100 native orchid species, several of which are endemic to French Island.

The park's wetlands are extensive and diverse, ranging from seasonal to permanent open water and providing habitat for an array of flora and fauna.

Over 230 bird species have been recorded including rare birds such as the White-Bellied Sea-Eagle, King Quail and the Orange-Bellied Parrot, as well as 33 species of waders which forage along the coast at low tide. The island supports a large population of Long-nosed Potaroo, as well as containing the most significant population of koalas in Victoria.

Koalas were introduced to French Island in the 1880s and by the 1920s overbrowsing was occurring and in 1923 the first koala transfers off the island took place. The population is free of the disease Chlamydia and was a major source of koalas for recolonising areas of the mainland. A sustainable koala population is now being managed using fertility control.

French Island Marine National Park

The French Island Marine National Park complements French Island National Park by protecting extensive sea grass beds, mangroves and mud flats that provide habitat for fish, waterbirds and invertebrates. For things to see and do check the French Island Marine National Park Visitor Guide.
